

The department of English attempts to be dynamic in teaching and learning methods.

- Chalk and Talk. The teachers in the department discuss and explain the topics in detail drawing examples from textbooks and real life in a lucid manner.
- Project writing is a convention in the department. The students get opportunities of problem-solving, experiential learning and exploring new areas. The teachers guide the students throughout the process of conceptualizing and writing the project. At the time of submission of project work, a viva is arranged within the department which enables the teachers to map learning outcome precisely.
- The students are always encouraged to interact and ask questions. Participative learning is a part of the academic culture within the department.
- Projectors are installed in classrooms; teachers use information and communications technology to complement their lecture, to make powerpoint presentations. Wifi is available in staffroom; several online resources are available in the library. All these facilitate pursuit of academic excellence. When the college campus is not available due to University examinations organized by the Sivnath Sastri College (Morning shift) or Prafulla Chandra College (Evening shift) – which function from the same campus – the department arranges online classes in Google Meet. Whatsapp groups and Google classrooms are also maintained where students can access study materials and submit given assignments.
- Several departments/cells collaborate and organize seminars and workshops which greatly enhance the learning experience.
- Excursions and visit to art gallery/ museum, value-added programmes and other such activities are organized which aim at an all-round development of personality.
- The department offers value added programmes – free of cost – to complement classroom teaching.
