Mrs. Hansda and Mr. Chakraborty opened the session with a focus on the importance of gender equity, discussing the societal and cultural barriers that perpetuate gender disparities. They emphasized the need for creating supportive environments that promote equal opportunities for all genders. The discussion then shifted to menstrual hygiene, an often neglected yet vital aspect of gender equality. Through interactive presentations, participants were educated on the biological aspects of menstruation, the importance of menstrual hygiene management, and the socio-economic challenges faced by menstruators, particularly in underprivileged communities. Practical advice on the use of sanitary products, sustainable alternatives, and proper disposal methods were shared, aiming to break the stigma and taboos associated with menstruation. The session also included personal stories and testimonies, which provided a deeper, more empathetic understanding of the issues at hand. Additionally, the event featured a Q&amp;A segment, allowing participants to engage directly with the coordinators, dispelling myths and addressing misconceptions. The overwhelming participation and the active engagement of attendees highlighted the community's commitment to fostering gender equity and improving menstrual health. The
